5 Ways to Unify Your Brand Across All Your Locations

Achieving and maintaining brand integrity across multiple locations is no small feat because your brand goes way beyond your tagline and aesthetic. It includes every aspect of your customer experience and your internal culture.

With so many moving parts, it can be difficult to achieve consistency as your operations expand. But you won't have that problem—you're reading this, after all!

In this guide, we'll show you 5 ways to centralise and strengthen your brand, no matter the size of your network. Let's jump in.

"Your brand is the single most important investment you can make in your business."

—Steve Forbes, chairman and editor-in-chief, Forbes Media

01

Lay the foundation for consistency

Consistency requires structure. Without it, your brand locations won't know what's expected of them and how to deliver a consistent, branded experience at their individual locations.

Take time at a corporate level to prepare comprehensive written standards for:

- Voice and tone: Your overall brand personality starts here.
- Visual branding: Use of logos, fonts, colour combinations, imagery, etc.
- Communication: How to share content on social media, work with local media for promotion, address customer inquiries and complaints in-person and online, and respond to online reviews—especially negative ones.
- Internal operations: How to onboard team members, streamline branding through corporate, and more.

Add examples of what to do and, perhaps more crucial, what not to do. For a truly cohesive brand experience, it's best not to leave anything up to interpretation. Be specific.

Shred415's family-friendly brand is reinforced across every location with inclusive verbiage like Shredder, Shredfam, Shredbesties, and their tagline, "more than a workout."

During onboarding, franchises receive detailed brand guidelines and personalised support to set up social media accounts and online properties. Sales, marketing, and operations tools and resources are always easily accessible, too.

Make it easy to get it right with a library of resources

Your brand locations should feel empowered to market in their local communities, but this is often where things go sideways. Make it easy for franchise owners to stick to brand guidelines by providing core materials and easy-to-access templates they can update with local specifics.

Use a centrally managed intranet to house all location-facing resources. It becomes your source of truth for pricing parameters, marketing tools, and other best practices, too.

Modern Acupuncture

Modern Acupuncture equips its franchisees with essential marketing materials based on brand campaigns and core pillars of patient care. Franchisees also have access to operational, clinical, and marketing training and other support materials for strategic planning purposes within their individual market.

"We love sharing different marketing initiatives working for clinics, so that others can take the same lead within their communities to break new patient ground. With the transparency among franchisees, along with brand training and customisable materials, we are able to keep brand integrity while growing and adapting together as a team."

—Megan Kok, director of marketing, Modern Acupuncture

Cultivate an exceptional 360-consumer experience

Your branding is so much more than your logo and marketing materials (although they're important, too). Your brand is how customers perceive your business based on the experience you provide. Your 360-customer experience includes every aspect of the customer journey, including:

- The language you use across your website, social media, etc.
- The overall vibe of your space
- The way your staff interacts with customers

and one other

- The experience at your front desk
- Email and text communications (welcome emails, follow-up texts, etc.)
- And much more

Every moment you engage with a customer, whether directly or indirectly, makes an impact. Details matter from their initial awareness of your brand to whether they feel like they belong in your community. Make every interaction count.

Black Swan Yoga has a unique in-studio experience: You won't find a waiting area or front desk at any location. Yet, thanks to a remote customer service team and Messenger[ai]—an AI-powered front desk—the brand is known for its top-notch customer service.

Messenger^[ai] turns missed calls into bookings with automated text messages that are both consistent and branded. To date, Black Swan has had nearly 22,000 messages exchanged through its AI front desk, and less than 2% have needed any human interaction.

Provide ongoing support

How do you ensure every experience at every location is consistent and memorable? It starts with training. When franchisees have buy-in right from the start, their teams do too. When onboarding new franchise owners:

- Emphasise your mission statement— everything you do as a brand should align with it.
- Break down your brand guidelines and explain the consequences of non-compliance.
- Reiterate the benefits of a consistent and trusted brand: increased customer loyalty and higher profit.

Training doesn't stop at onboarding, especially as your brand evolves. To keep franchisees on track:

- Host monthly webinars to educate, collaborate, and discuss brand guidelines as well as pain-points.
- Provide corporate support for each location and in each region.
- Use an annual conference to reinforce consistency in brand experience and guidelines.

Training sessions are an opportunity to learn from your locations. Create a supportive environment for owners to speak candidly about their day-to-day experiences and share feedback. The stronger your partnership, the stronger the brand.

Host an annual brand conference to energise and empower your locations. At the event, make sure sessions are interactive, educational, and include plenty of Q&A. Location owners will leave reenergised and ready to create memorable brand experiences.
